

UNDP Annual Report 2011/2012: The Sustainable Future We Want

Document Summary

UNDP has a presence on the ground in over 170 countries and territories and decades of concrete development experience in countries ranging from fragile States to middle-income countries like Brazil and Indonesia. This, combined with our four focus areas — poverty reduction and achievement of the Millennium Development Goals (MDGs); democratic governance; crisis prevention and recovery; and environment and sustainable development — make us uniquely situated and qualified to answer the UN's call for a better and more sustainable future.

Document Highlights

- In Nepal, more than 50,000 people benefited from an off-grid network of micro-hydropower systems set up with support from UNDP and the World Bank; globally, with UNDP's support, 41 countries adopted initiatives successfully increasing access to renewable and clean energy.
- The Government of South Africa incorporated four pro-poor UNDP policy recommendations into its 20-year national development plan.
- On 23 October 2011 — the date of Tunisia's first free and democratic elections — 76 percent of the country's 4.1 million registered voters cast their ballots, with critical support from UNDP and the European Union.

- About 1.6 million people benefited from UNDP jobs programmes, including those established following major disasters.
